Complete Market Reports Corrected Each Day Giving the Wholesale Prices of Commodities, Farm Produce and Vegetables.

Portland, Oct. 12.—Scarcity and high prices mark the condition of the fruit market in Portland this fall. Even apples, for whose abundance Oregon has heretofore been noted, are in very limited supply. This scarcity will be the more marked as the season advances, and so no relief is expected this year. Housekeepers are at their wit's end in regards to putting up fruits for winter and spring use, and are now turning their attention to tomatoes, which have been comparatively cheap. The first frost, however, is expected to put a stop to tomato-gathering. All tomato-growers report having done well from their tomato crops this year.

Some commission firms look for lower prices to rule in chickens, eggs and butter after the fair closes. They attribute most of the busy times the past summer to the present large number of transient people who were here to attend the exposition or to take part in it. "When these people go away," they argue, "there will be a falling off in the local demand for two or three months, at least, as there will be few visitors to the city from the outside until those coming as a result of the new railroad appear. After that the demand will be greater than ever, as the new Northern Pacific Railroad coming down the north bank of the Columbia will draw crowds of workers and business men hither from all parts."
